Hello,

Can you tell me, what's the status of South Carolina's compliance with the Real ID law?

Do you know when travelers with S.C. driver's licenses will need alternative form of identification for airplanes?

Will the rules, when implemented, also apply to federal buildings?

Best,

Thank you for contacting the Office of State Issued ID Support.

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

You can find an acceptable list of ID's for airline travel from TSA here:

<http://www.tsa.gov/traveler-information/acceptable-ids>

If a child is younger than 18, they are not required to have ID to travel. They'll just need their boarding pass.

I am from Washington state and will be traveling with my family to Hawaii next week. Two of my sons have expired passports, and one has an enhanced license and other has a standard license. Will we encounter any kind of issue with boarding our flights?

Also, the TSA website does not list a specific date for enforcement. It still lists a regular driver's license as suitable identification to board a commercial airplane.

Thanks so much.

I live in Missouri, a state that has elected to NOT comply with the REAL ID Act. I have a driver's licensed issued Nov. 2015, but my husband's is in the old format and will not expire for 2 more years.

We fly frequently and I would like not to have to take my passport everywhere we go. Is there a ID card that we can obtain that will be acceptable identification in the future?

How are they obtained?

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

Hello ,

My name is (b)(6) I currently reside in New Jersey. I have a question regards to the "Real ID Act".

For Christmas Dec 2015 – I was given a airplane ticket to Puerto Rico for Feb 26- March 6- of 2016, I do not have a passport as of right now .

Will this Act affect me in any way as far as using my driver identification I.D to travel on these dates ?

Thank You.

Subject: REAL ID and other ID for CONUS commercial air travel

We have two very pertinent questions concerning CONUS air travel on commercial airlines. Please RSVP.

1) With respect to REAL ID and according to 6 CFR Part 37, Office of the Secretary, DHS, Final Rule, the Summary states, "This final rule changes both document enrollment dates to October 1, 2020". Does this mean, in relation to CONUS commercial air travel, that non-REAL ID driver's licenses will still be accepted at TSA checkpoints up to this date?

2) Without respect to future REAL ID requirements, there are other forms of identification TSA lists as acceptable. TSA states one of the acceptable forms of identification is "U.S. military ID (active duty or retired military and their dependents, and DoD civilians)". Is the Common Access Card (CAC) included in this statement as an acceptable form of identification to be used at a TSA checkpoint for CONUS commercial air travel?

Answers to these questions will alleviate much confusion many millions are experiencing, wondering when/if they will have to hold a REAL ID driver's license or if their CAC will suffice for CONUS air travel. You may also want to include these questions in their entirety as FAQs for that reason. Thank you.

Respectfully,

...and millions of other CONUS air travelers

Hello my husband and I live in Minnesota and will be traveling domestically in April. Since Minnesota is a non-compliant state for the Real ID enforcement, we are hoping that an enhanced drivers license will allow us to travel and not be required to apply for a passport just to get on a plane to go to a different state.

There is so much information out there and it's all so confusing. We just want to be able to get on a plane domestically and not worry about being turned away when we get to the airport for lack of proper identification.

Subject: IL residents flying in Feb 2016

Hi,
I have a trip planned in Early February with 16 family members. Will we all need to get Passport Cards to board our flight? I am finding conflicting information on the TSA.gov website and your website.

Thank you,

Thank you for contacting the Office of State Issued ID Support.

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

You can find an acceptable list of ID's for airline travel from TSA here:
<http://www.tsa.gov/traveler-information/acceptable-ids>

If a child is younger than 18, they are not required to have ID to travel. They'll just need their boarding pass.

To whom it may concern,

I have just learned that IL is 1 of the 5 states listed as "non-compliant" as it relates to the REAL ID enforcement. I am scheduled to fly out 1/11/16 (and 2 additional flights in the next 3 weeks) and I do not have a passport. I am a resident of IL with a valid driver's license and TSA pre-check status. Is this going to be an issue? Can you shed some light on the timeline as to how long I have in order to get a passport? They generally take some time to acquire as I understand it. Thanks!

Hello,

My family and I are traveling from MN to Hawaii in February 2016. We do not have passports and are concerned that our drivers licenses won't be an acceptable form of ID in the MSP airport

(or any of the other airports). Is this accurate? Since our trip is coming up, I wanted to double check in case there is something we should do/bring.

Your original request was "what do I need?" for travel purposes which is why I enclosed the information regarding the current status of TSA enforcement. Further I provided the TSA link of acceptable identifications because you only inquired about the FOID and CCW.

Your FOID card or conceal carry permit do not establish legal lawful presence in the United States and therefore do not meet the REAL ID requirements.

You will still be able to travel with your IL license until the TSA enforcement date begins after a lengthy notification period.

I'm not sure you understood my request. I want to know if my FOID card or my conceal carry permit is acceptable as Real ID. Background checks were needed for me to obtain, so I'd this good enough to let me fly try to/from Illinois. I already read the link you sent me but still does not help me with an answer.

Thank you for contacting the Office of State Issued ID Support.

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

You can find an acceptable list of ID's for airline travel from TSA here:

<http://www.tsa.gov/traveler-information/acceptable-ids>

If a child is younger than 18, they are not required to have ID to travel. They'll just need their boarding pass.

I live in Illinois and hear that in order to fly on a commercial plane, my drivers license may not be acceptable identification. I gave a federally issued FOID card plus an Illinois concealed carry card. I may need to fly from Peoria to Orlando very soon for a family members funeral. What do I need? Please reply ASAP. Thank you.

If you fly internationally you will need either a passport or passport card. WA state does however offer the Enhanced Drivers License which can act in lieu of a passport.

Subject: PASSPORT TO CANADA????

I just read the article about WA. state driver's license not being enough to fly to Canada. Why have we not heard about this before and what else is needed on a License? I have a Passport but believe it is up next year....I have family in Canada and how in the world do things like this happen without people knowing.? What more is needed that is not already shown on my passport/license. This all is going “overkill” on rules and yet the criminals still run free. I will be 83 this year and am appauled at this country and the rules that don’t work.. security is not working now so what else can be done that is not being done now?

I don’t know where this letter is going...I am a WA state American citizen and think all of these rules are made up by men who cannot sleep at night. I would appreciate some writing back and if this article I read is even true.,. Supposedly 4-5 states are not according to rules required...WA being one of them

Thank for reading this

Hello DHS,

My son is 14 years old and will be traveling unaccompanied to Oklahoma on 9 Jan 2016. He will be returning home to California on 3 Feb 2016 unaccompanied as well. I have a concern regarding the REAL ID act and how it affects those entering California after Jan 10, 2016.

Which forms of ID will he need ? I was just made aware of the Passport being a valid ID but I am unsure if this is only for those 18 years and older. I have made an appointment to renew his passport for this reason.

Please indicate to me if a US Passport is necessary for him, or which other forms of ID are acceptable (birth certificate, school ID, social security).

Thank you for your time.

Sincerely,

Subject: Question re: Timing of Enforcement for REAL ID in Illinois

Hello,

I am unclear about the new ID standards in Illinois. There is conflicting timing/information on your website about needing a passport to travel domestically.

This page indicates I don't need a passport to travel domestically from Illinois yet, and I'll get 120 days notice: <http://www.dhs.gov/real-id-public-faqs>

but this page indicates Illinois is non-compliant and enforcement begins 1/10/16: <http://www.dhs.gov/real-id-enforcement-brief#>

Which is it?

I am traveling for business later this month, so I need to know if I need to get a new passport with my married name since I am a newlywed and just legally changed my name (on my IL drivers license only).

Please help!

Subject: Airport travel with Driver's License

Hello,

I live in Washington and I have heard that my driver's license may not be accepted for travel anymore. On the REAL ID state status page it says that Washington will be subject to enforcement on Jan. 10th; will this affect my flight on the 11th, or is this just for the state to begin a different licensing process?

My grandmother and I plan on flying from Illinois to florida and back to Illinois. She is a resident of Illinois which is currently not in compliance with the real Id act. We plan on flying in late February or early march of 2016. Will she be able to fly with her Illinois state issued ID card?

We have two very pertinent questions concerning CONUS air travel on commercial airlines. Please RSVP.

1) With respect to REAL ID and according to 6 CFR Part 37, Office of the Secretary, DHS, Final Rule, the Summary states, "This final rule changes both document enrollment dates to October 1, 2020". Does this mean, in relation to CONUS commercial air travel, that non-REAL ID driver's licenses will still be accepted at TSA checkpoints up to this date?

2) Without respect to future REAL ID requirements, there are other forms of identification TSA lists as acceptable. TSA states one of the acceptable forms of identification is "U.S. military ID (active duty or retired military and their dependents, and DoD civilians)". Is the Common Access Card (CAC) included in this statement as an acceptable form of identification to be used at a TSA checkpoint for CONUS commercial air travel?

Answers to these questions will alleviate much confusion many millions are experiencing, wondering when/if they will have to hold a REAL ID driver's license or if their CAC will suffice for CONUS air travel. You may also want to include these questions in their entirety as FAQs for that reason. Thank you.

Respectfully,

Hello my husband and I live in Minnesota and will be traveling domestically in April. Since Minnesota is a non-compliant state for the Real ID enforcement, we are hoping that an enhanced drivers license will allow us to travel and not be required to apply for a passport just to get on a plane to go to a different state.

There is so much information out there and it's all so confusing. We just want to be able to get on a plane domestically and not worry about being turned away when we get to the airport for lack of proper identification.

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

You can find an acceptable list of ID's for airline travel from TSA here:

If a child is younger than 18, they are not required to have ID to travel. They'll just need their boarding pass.

DHS requires visitors to present government-issued identification for access to its facilities. For visitors presenting a state-issued driver's license or identification card, DHS may only accept such documents if they are issued by states that are REAL ID compliant. If the state that issued your license is listed as noncompliant, please bring an alternate form of government-issued photo ID – such as a passport or Federal employee, military, or veteran identification card to facilitate access.

Missouri and Illinois currently do not meet that requirement and it is my understanding that their extension expires on Jan 10, 2016. Will this effect an employer's ability to accept those state issued DL as a list B document?

Are driver authorization and driver privilege cards acceptable List B documents?

Yes. A driver authorization or driver privilege card issued by a State or outlying possession of the United States is an acceptable List B document, if it contains a photograph or identifying information such as name, date of birth, sex, height, color of eyes, and address. An employer must examine the document presented by its employee and determine whether it meets Form I-9 requirements. If the employer accepts a driver authorization or driver privilege card as a List B document, the employer must also examine a List C document establishing employment authorization.

Thank you for the feedback on the site.

There has been no change in the travel documents for domestic flights. DHS has not announced the schedule for REAL ID enforcement at airports. Any dates that you see in the press are speculation and not based on any statement made by DHS or TSA. You may continue to use your New York State driver's license for boarding aircraft for domestic travel. New York has an extension through, at least, October 10, 2016, meaning Federal agencies can continue to accept driver's license issued by New York. That extension is renewable if the state continues to demonstrate progress towards compliance.

The date of enforcement for Washington State refers to enforcement for purpose of accessing Federal facilities – not for boarding aircraft. I can understand the confusion and will refer your comment to the right people.

Dear Staff at the Office of State-Issued Identification Support:

Thanks to a friend who sent us relevant DHS links, members of my family have been alerted to DHS changes in travel documents required for domestic flights. I am unhappy that when I renewed my New York State drivers license in July 2015, NO ONE told me about the fact that a regular license could not be used for domestic travel after October 2016. I would have obtained an enhanced license then. I also found the webpage of “Public FAQs” very confusing, if not out of date. The links for commenting on that page and the other FAQ page (for states, which was even more confusing) do not work. I also got a pop-up asking me to complete a survey about the webpage but none of the choices fit my situation and it did not allow me to leave comments. This is not very meaningful in terms of providing feedback.

The “Public FAQ” page was “last published” on Dec. 28, 2015, but as seen below, the statement that one does not need a passport is confusing if not contradictory since there is no clarification about “when “120 days” of notice begins/began or when “enforcement at airports begins.” There is no mention of or link to information that would update this statement, such as the interactive map at <http://www.dhs.gov/real-id-enforcement-brief#> At that site, the information for Washington State says that starting Jan. 10, 2016, those residents “will be subject to enforcement.” That’s very different from what is provided on the FAQ page!

I hope some improvements can be made in access to information, so there will not be a lot of unhappy people, and chaos, at airports in the months to come. One simple fix would be updating the FAQ page.

Do I need a passport for domestic air travel starting January 2016?

A: No. DHS is in the process of scheduling plans for implementing REAL ID enforcement at airports. DHS will ensure that the traveling public has ample notice (at least, 120 days) before any changes are made that might affect their travel planning.

Until enforcement at the airports begins, the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept state-issued driver’s licenses and identification cards from all states, as well other forms of acceptable identification listed on the TSA website.

Do I need a passport for domestic air travel starting January 2016?

A: No. DHS is in the process of scheduling plans for implementing REAL ID enforcement at airports. DHS will ensure that the traveling public has ample notice (at least, 120 days) before any changes are made that might affect their travel planning.

Until enforcement at the airports begins, the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept state-issued driver's licenses and identification cards from all states, as well other forms of acceptable identification listed on the TSA website.

Can you confirm Washington, Illinois, New Mexico and Missouri have not been granted an extension?

Thanks!

Date:	2016/01/04 16:13:48
Type:	Note

Hello,

I am unclear about the new ID standards in Illinois. There is conflicting timing/information on your website about needing a passport to travel domestically.

This page indicates I don't need a passport to travel domestically from Illinois yet, and I'll get 120 days notice: <http://www.dhs.gov/real-id-public-faqs>

but this page indicates Illinois is non-compliant and enforcement begins 1/10/16: <http://www.dhs.gov/real-id-enforcement-brief#>

Which is it?

I am traveling for business later this month, so I need to know if I need to get a new passport with my married name since I am a newlywed and just legally changed my name (on my IL drivers license only).

Please help!

Thanks,

My question is specifically related to the states that don't meet the "Real ID" requirement. Missouri and Illinois currently do not meet that requirement and it is my understanding that their extension expires on Jan 10,2016. Will this effect an employer's ability to accept those state issued DL as a list B document?

Are driver authorization and driver privilege cards acceptable List B documents?

Yes. A driver authorization or driver privilege card issued by a State or outlying possession of the United States is an acceptable List B document, if it contains a photograph or identifying information such as name, date of birth, sex, height, color of eyes, and address. An employer must examine the document presented by its employee and determine whether it meets Form I-9 requirements. If the employer accepts a driver authorization or driver privilege card as a List B document, the employer must also examine a List C document establishing employment authorization.

I'm filling out paper work for a passport however that process will take 4-6 weeks. Will my Identification card from Illinois still be valid?

To Whom It May Concern,

I am having difficulty getting non-conflicting answer on the following question. Will ALL airport security checkpoints accept an Illinois drivers license during the months of January & February? I am a resident of Illinois and hold an Illinois drivers license. From what I can tell, I may use the Illinois drivers license at Midway & O'Hare, but there is nothing on the Orlando International Airport website and the only contact number is a recorded call with no information and no option to talk to a human being. The DHS site has conflicting info. One answer says 120 days notice to the public, another comment says January 20, 2016. So please, can someone with authority tell me what identification I need to bring with me to any United States airport in January and February of 2016?

Thank you,

Surely someone in your position in "Threat Prevention and Security" could come up with some type of remedy for my problem. I already have a letter from Homeland Security showing that I jumped through all their hoops, but have been told by security that this is only a form letter and of no use to them. It shows my Redress Control Number on it - (b)(6) and I enter that on all reservations with all airlines, but nothing seems to help me get through. Do you have ANY suggestions for me? I sincerely hope you do.

Subject: Real ID

I have been reading about this new program, and wonder how I can strengthen my ID's when flying. I am stopped every year at the airports. Doesn't seem to matter if it is a domestic flight or an international flight. It is to the point now that I am used to being stopped and expect it. I would just like to be able to travel without these inconveniences. I have already provided Homeland Security with all the information they require, and they always send me a letter. (copy attached). Even when I show this letter at the airports, I am still detained. Last year when entering the USA in Houston returning from our annual vacation in Puerto Vallarta, I was questioned about the letter, and told that all it was is a form letter and meaningless.

Is there ANYTHING that I can show that will get me through the security lines quicker, and allow me to print my boarding passes without going to the counter and being cross examined?

Two years ago, when detained in Houston, the officer I spoke with commented to me (b)(6) - I bet we see more of you than your wife does" Very nice, but it still doesn't eliminate this extra step I must always take.

I would appreciate any help yo can provide me. We leave for Puerto Vallarta Mexico on January 6th. I have my letter, but wish I had more. I look forward to hearing from you with any suggestions you might have.

(b)(6)

I can also provide you with a copy of my passport, if you think that this would help.

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

Hi! I've just found out about the Real ID Act. I have an Illinois drivers license. My passport was stolen October 30th and I haven't replaced it yet. What other forms of identification can I use in order to board a domestic flight? I will fly out of O'Hare on January 9th, and I'm worried about being able to board a flight in Salt Lake City to fly home on the 16th.

Subject: question

Good morning, I have a question regarding an upcoming trip I am planning. I will be flying from PIA in Peoria, Illinois to MCO in Orlando. We have a connecting flight out of Atlanta. What identification will we need for this travel since the State of Illinois does not have the "official" new license or identification. I have a current Illinois driver's license, what else would be needed. I do have my birth certificate. I do NOT have a current passport (actually the one I have is over 30 yrs, old and certainly not enough time to get a new one.) We will be travelling in four weeks.

Thank you for any help you might be able to give to me regarding this matter.

I have a DC drivers license that was issued in 2011 and does not expire until 2019. DC is a REAL ID-compliant state, and its DMV website says that those whose licenses expire in the future will not have to have a REAL ID license until expiration — in my case in 2019. I want to verify with DHS that my current DC license that was issued before REAL ID licenses were available will be valid in the future to enter federal buildings and at airports and that I do not have to get a new license prior to my 2019 expiration — since it was issued by a compliant state.

From the DC DMV website:

Is my current license or identification card still valid?

Yes. Your current driver license or identification card is valid until its expiration date and will be accepted for federal purposes (such as entering federal buildings and boarding airplanes). When you renew your existing credential (which may not expire until April 2022), you will then need to bring in your documents to revalidate your identity, Social Security number, and residency.

Thank you.

Are driver authorization and driver privilege cards acceptable List B documents?

Yes. A driver authorization or driver privilege card issued by a State or outlying possession of the United States is an acceptable List B document, if it contains a photograph or identifying information such as name, date of birth, sex, height, color of eyes, and address. An employer must examine the document presented by its employee and determine whether it meets Form I-9 requirements. If the employer accepts a driver authorization or driver privilege card as a List B document, the employer must also examine a List C document establishing employment authorization.

First of all, Thank you for your quick response!

From what I understand in your e-mail, we will be able to get on the flights to and from MN at the end of February 2016 because dates have not been set to enforce the Real ID at the airports yet and our regular driver's licenses will be accepted by TSA. Whew, thank you! I wasn't sure if we'd have time to get enhanced driver's licenses or passports. Now we don't have to be concerned with that.

I appreciate the links you sent as well. They are very helpful.

Have a good day!

Hello,

My family and I purchased tickets for flights going out of the Minneapolis airport in Feb 2016. I've been hearing concerns about the state of MN being non compliant with the Real ID standards. We still have the normal MN state issued drivers licenses.

Are we going to be able to fly out of MN and back in for our upcoming vacation? I'm not finding the date as to when the air travel restriction may go into place. I only find wording that says 2016, but not a specific date.

Thank you

Thank you for contacting the Office of State Issued ID Support.

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

You can find the latest information and requirements regarding the REAL ID program at the link below:

You can find an acceptable list of ID's for airline travel from TSA here:

If a child is younger than 18, they are not required to have ID to travel. They'll just need their boarding pass.

I see that Wisconsin is a compliant state. Do licenses that were issued before 2012 but do not expire until after the deadline need to be reapplied for or reissued? Thank you
